

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Jonas Baes is a composer, ethnomusicologist and activist currently teaching at the University of the Philippines. His music compositions have been performed in Asia, Europe and the United States and his articles have been published in international refereed journals such as Ethnomusicology, Perfect Beat and the Journal of Intercultural Studies <ajpbaes@yahoo.com>

Giorgio Biancorosso is an assistant professor in Music and a member of the Film Culture project at The University of Hong Kong. He obtained a PhD in Musicology at Princeton in 2002 and in 2001-2003 was a Mellon Fellow at the Society of Fellows at Columbia University. His research interests include film criticism, opera, and the psychology of music <rogopag@hkucc.hku.hk>

Daniel Long is an associate professor in the Department of Japanese Language and Literature at Tokyo Metropolitan University. He specialises in Japanese linguistics, particularly the sociolinguistic aspects of natural language acquisition and language contact with other languages or among various dialects of Japanese <dlong@bcomp.metro-u.ac.jp>

Adam Riddell completed a Masters in European Cultural Policy and Management at the Centre for Cultural Policy Studies, University of Warwick (UK) under the tutelage of Professor Oliver Bennett. He now works for a public relations agency in Jersey <adam.riddell@gmail.com>

Heather Sparling is an associate professor of Ethnomusicology in the Dept of Heritage and Culture of Cape Breton University, Sydney, Nova Scotia (Canada). Her primary research activity concerns Cape Breton song culture <heather_sparling@capebretonu.ca>

Jun'ichiro Suwa is associate professor at Hirosaki University (Japan). His has conducted field research in cultural anthropology and ethnomusicology in Papua New Guinea, the Tuva Republic (Russian Federation) and mainland Japan <suwa@cc.hirosaki-u.ac.jp>

Tony Whincup is head of the School of Visual and Material Culture in the College of Creative Arts at Massey University, Wellington (New Zealand). His work addresses issues of self-definition and self-recognition and emerges at the interface of the disciplines of photography and anthropology <A.N.Whincup@massey.ac.nz>