

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Godfrey Baldacchino is professor and Canada Research Chair (Island Studies) at the University of Prince Edward Island; visiting professor of sociology at the University of Malta; and executive editor of the Island Studies Journal. <gbaldacchino@upei.ca>

Laurie Brinklow is a PhD candidate in the School of Geography and Environmental Studies at the University of Tasmania. A poet, editor, and book publisher from Prince Edward Island, her research explores people's attachment to islands by examining "islandness" in the work of Tasmanian and Newfoundland artists. <Laurie.Brinklow@utas.edu.au>

Grayson Cooke is an interdisciplinary scholar and media artist and a senior lecturer in the School of Arts and Social Sciences at Southern Cross University, Lismore. He has exhibited, performed and published internationally, and is currently researching live audio-visual performance in Australia. <grayson.cooke@scu.edu.au>

Jon Corbett is an assistant professor in the Community, Culture and Global Studies Unit at University of British Columbia, Okanagan and the co-director of the Centre for Social, Spatial and Economic Justice. Jon's community-based research investigates cartographic processes and tools that are used by local communities to help express their relationship to, and knowledge of, their land and resources. <jon.corbett@ubc.ca>

Rebecca Coyle is an associate professor in the School of Arts and Social Sciences at Southern Cross University, Lismore and is editor of Screen Sound: The Australasian Journal of Soundtrack Studies <<http://www.screenoundjournal.org/>>. Her most recent research projects cluster around eco-media, regional creative industries and screen animation. <rebecca.coyle@scu.edu.au>

Helen Dawson is senior archaeologist at the Museum of London and Honorary Research Fellow in Classical and Archaeological Studies at the University of Kent, where she has been lecturing in Aegean prehistory since 2006. Her interests are in island archaeology and Mediterranean prehistory. <helen.dawson@uclmail.net>

Philip Hayward is Deputy Pro Vice Chancellor (Research) at Southern Cross University, Lismore; an adjunct professor at Pattimura University, Ambon; and editor of Shima: The International Journal of Research into Island Cultures. His current research is addressed to the cultural history of the Amami and Tokara islands of southern Japan. <phayward2010@gmail.com>

Rosita Henry is an associate professor of Anthropology at James Cook University, Cairns. She is currently president of the Australian Anthropological Society (2011-2012). Her book, Performing Place, Practising Memory: Aborigines, Hippies and the State will be published in July (Berghahn 2012). <rosita.henry@jcu.edu.au>

Ian Maxwell is currently Pro Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences at the University of Sydney. He has published extensively on a range of performance-related practices, from hip hop to sailing and religious observance. <ian.maxwell@sydney.edu.au>

Christine Pam has a PhD in anthropology from James Cook University, Cairns.

Arianne Carvalhedo Reis is a postdoctoral fellow at Southern Cross University, Coffs Harbour, and assistant editor of Shima: The International Journal of Research into Island Cultures. <arianne.reis@scu.edu.au>

Zach Romano is a negotiations analyst with the Tlowitsis Nation and holds a Master's degree in Interdisciplinary Indigenous Graduate Studies from University of British Columbia, Okanagan. He is interested in the interplay of memory, place and diaspora in land claims negotiations, and in exploring the challenges for First Nation communities at odds with bounded notions of Aboriginal rights. <romano.zachary@gmail.com>

Junichiro Suwa is an associate professor of Cultural Anthropology at Hirosaki University, Japan. He has conducted extensive research in Papua New Guinea, the Tuva Republic of the Russian Federation, Romania and Japan in local music and performing arts. <suwa@cc.hirosaki-u.ac.jp>

Brychan Thomas is Reader in Innovation Policy at the University of Glamorgan Business School. Over the past fourteen years he has been involved in thirty-eight research and consultancy projects and has authored/co-authored 315 publications and 95 journal papers. <bcthomas@glam.ac.uk>

Simon Thomas is a senior lecturer at the University of Glamorgan Business School, subject group leader for Enterprise, Economic Development and Sport, and programme leader for Leisure, Sport, Tourism and Events. His research publications are in the area of heritage tourism. <sthomas2@glam.ac.uk>