

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

William Ayres, Professor of Anthropology at the University of Oregon, USA, studies archaeological and environmental evidence of island colonisation and culture change in the Pacific Islands. He conducts archaeological field studies in Micronesia (especially Pohnpei) and Polynesia (Rapa Nui and Samoa). Among his long-standing concerns are heritage preservation and conservation issues for cultural resources. <wsayres@uoregon.edu>

Jonas Baes is a composer, ethnomusicologist and cultural activist. He is presently professor of composition and music theory at the University of the Philippines College of Music and is active as a concert artist and lecturer. He was recently guest professor in Malaysia, Japan and Germany, and actively writing on the indigenous peoples in the Philippines. <Jonas.baes@gmail.com>

Christian Fleury is a geographer at the University of Caen Basse-Normandie, France. His publications are mainly centered on sea appropriation conflicts as well as island issues as identity and border effects. <fleury.cote@wanadoo.fr>

Jingqiu Guan graduated with a BA in Economics from St. Mary's College in 2011, earned a Master of Education in International Education Policy from Harvard University in 2012, and is presently pursuing graduate studies at the University of Iowa, USA. <jjg030@mail.harvard.edu>

Henry Johnson is Professor in the Department of Music, University of Otago, New Zealand. His primary research interests are in the fields of Ethnomusicology, Island Studies and Asian Studies. He has undertaken research on many small island cultures and has published in Shima, the Journal of Marine and Island Cultures, and Island Studies Journal. <henry.johnson@otago.ac.nz>

Sueo Kuwahara is a professor of anthropology at Kagoshima University, Japan. He has conducted fieldwork in Malaysia, Micronesia and Japan's southwestern archipelago. His research interest is in the influence of globalisation on island cultures and societies. More recently he edited a book on the islands of Kagoshima. <kuwahara@leh.kagoshima-u.ac.jp>

Irene Lucchitti is a specialist in early 20th Century Irish literature and culture, with an abiding interest in the writers of the Blasket Islands. She studied the Irish language at the University of Sydney, and completed her PhD. in the English Literatures Program at the University of Wollongong, where she is now an Honorary Fellow. She has published numerous articles on the Blasket writers and is currently engaged in research into the work of Peig Sayers. <irenelucchitti@yahoo.com.au>

Jerome L. McElroy is Professor of Economics in the Department of Business Administration and Economics at Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, Indiana, USA. His research focuses on tropical island tourism and the characteristics of small-island economies. <jmcelroy@saintmarys.edu>

Karin Speedy is an associate professor and Head of French and Francophone Studies at Macquarie University, Sydney, Australia. Historian, linguist and literary specialist, she focuses much of her research on the Pacific where she works on historical, cultural and linguistic links between the Pacific and the Indian Ocean, language contact, and colonial and postcolonial literature from the region. <karin.speedy@mq.edu.au>

Lynda Harling Stalker is an associate professor at St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, Nova Scotia, Canada. Her research has largely focused on narratives of craftwork on islands. Her upcoming project is in collaboration with Kathryn Burnett about cultural work on Western Scottish and North Atlantic Canadian islands. <lharling@stfx.ca>