

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Rosie Alexander is the Careers Manager for the University of the Highlands and Islands and is also studying for a PhD with the University of Derby on the career and migration pathways of higher education students from Orkney and Shetland. Her professional and research interests surround career pathways and guidance practices in rural and remote communities, particularly islands. <rosie.alexander@uhi.ac.uk>

Fiona Anderson is a Senior Teaching Fellow in History of Art at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. Her research is primarily concerned with American art and queer cultures from the 1960s to the 1990s. She is currently completing a book on art and gay cruising on New York's derelict waterfront in the years immediately preceding the HIV/AIDS epidemic. <fiona.anderson@ed.ac.uk>

Gordon Dawes was called to the English Bar in 1989 and the Guernsey Bar in 2001. He is a partner and advocate in the litigation department of Mourant Ozannes, a leading offshore financial centre firm. He is the author of Laws of Guernsey (Oxford, 2003, Hart Publishing) and a member of the editorial board of the Jersey and Guernsey Law Review. <gordon.dawes@mourantozannes.com>

Philip Hayward is a research professor in the School of Arts and Social Sciences at Southern Cross University, Lismore, Australia. He primarily researches island societies and cultures in the Asia Pacific region but has also researched and published on Canadian, Chilean and British island topics. <prhshima@gmail.com>

Henry Johnson is Professor of Music at the University of Otago, New Zealand. His research interests are in Island Studies, Asian Studies and Ethnomusicology, and he has carried out field research in a number of island cultures in Europe, Asia and Australasia. His publications have appeared in Shima, the Journal of Marine and Island Cultures and Island Studies Journal. <henry.johnson@otago.ac.nz>

Susie Khamis is a senior lecturer in Macquarie University's Department of Media, Music, Communication and Cultural Studies, Sydney, Australia. Her research interests include branding, foodways and fashion media. She was founding editor of Locale: the Australasian-Pacific Journal of Regional Food Studies from 2001-2004.

Lisa Milner is a lecturer in the School of Arts and Social Sciences at Southern Cross University, Coffs Harbour, Australia. Current research interests include screen representations of workers and trade unions, and labour history biography. She is a member of the international research project 'In the Same Boat? Shipbuilding and ship repair workers: a global labour history (1950-2010)'. <lisa.milner@scu.edu.au>

Alistair Welsh is a lecturer in Indonesian language at Deakin University, Melbourne, Australia. He also coordinates Deakin's in-country Indonesian language program, in Malang, East Java. His research interests include the Cocos Malay dialect, its island speech community, and the realms of the intercultural, in order to better understand identity positioning and intercultural relations. <alis@deakin.edu.au>